Further investigation into the wounding of Earl R. Lewis, little son of Otis W. Lewis of Nelson street, with an air-gun yesterday makes it apparent that young Renaud Ladrie, who was at first thought to have been holding the weapon, was in his house at the time and was attracted outside by the commotion caused by the affair, and it is thought that one of two other youngsters who were playing in the vicinity was responsible. Needless to say, airguns are more scarce in that vicinity of the city after the severe injury sustained by the Lewis boy. The little fellow was quite feverish last night and somewhat weak from loss of blood, a vein on the head having been punctured by the bullet.
